

		(ii) <pre> <?php session_start(); $make = $_post['ComputerMake']; ?>  Computer type selected: <?php echo $_session["compType"]; ?>   Computer make selected: <?php echo $make; ?>  </pre>	3 Award 1 mark for correct use of <code>session_start()</code> Award 1 mark for assignment and display of input value for make to PHP variable using name attribute (NB do not penalise for use of <code>$_get</code>). Note that both the <code>$_post</code> and <code>echo</code> statements must be stated in the solution. Also, accept <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <code>echo</code> <code>$_post['ComputerMake'];</code> as alternative to <code>echo $make;</code> <code>$make</code> assigned to a session variable which is later used to display the make Award 1 mark for displaying content of PHP session variable <code>$_session['compType']</code> Note: do not penalise for use of alternatives to <code>p</code> tag Accept any suitable session variable name for computer type and also for posted variable used for computer make.
--	--	---	--